THE DAILY SENTINEL.

C. L. MACARTHUR & D. M. KEEFER, EDITORS.

Thursday Morning, December 19.

The President's Message.

We have only had time to give this document a hasty perusal. The message does not differ materially from what public opinion expected at the hands of President Tyler. His interests and feelings are now as ever, strongly centered in the Annexation of Texas. He urges upon Congress the necessity of acquiring this Territory and essays to prove that annexation would advance the interests of the country, would promote the well-being of all parties, and insists that this measure could be consummated on terms equally honorable and creditable to all, and without breaking the bonds of peace and amity now happily existing, with any of the parties interested. The message intimates that were Texas only to be acquired by war, the Executive would still urge upon Congress the necessity of immediate Annexation. So Texas is to be acquired under any and every circumstance. The President thinks the best mode of affecting Annexation, is by a joint resolution of both houses of Congress. This is probably the only way by which the measure can receive the assent of the "the powers that be" under present circumstances.

As with Texas so with Oregon—the President goes in for annexing all the land "lying" us. The message recommends the establishment of military posts in this Territory, and the passage of laws on its government. This part of the message will unquestionably meet the views of a large majority of the American people.

Over 7,000,000 will remain in the Treasury after the payment of all out-standing demands in the Treasury. The surplus which had fallen into the hands of the President informs Congress "has passed away." But he neglects to further state that the judicious tariff system now in operation, was the cause of restoring trade and commerce to a healthy basis. So far as any opinions are expressed on the tariff, the President declares himself in favor of so much tariff being levied as will support government, and this he wishes to be so arranged as will protect those branches of industry which need protection.

Congressional.

J. Q. Adams, the old man eloquent, has succeeded in getting the 21st rule rescinded. The vote stood, yeas 108, nays 80. The right of petition is restored.

Thomas Corwin is elected United States Senator from Ohio for six years from the 4th of March next. The vote on joint ballot stood, Corwin 61, Disney 15.

Our neighbors of the Courier will please accept our thanks for courtesy extended in furnishing us copies of the message, although furnished at a late hour. The issue of the message in an extra form prevented us from publishing a regular edition of the Sentinel.

Justin Butterfield Esq., has been removed from the office of U. S. District Attorney for Illinois, and Mark Skinner Esq., appointed in his place.

The Madisonian has been busy, for some time past, in attempts to write down the Hon. J. Q. Adams. The goat on the ox's horn, which offered to fly off it its weight was oppressive, approximated only in a small degree to the presumption of the "timothy and clover" sapient who writes himself John Jones.

A MIRACLE TO A CHINESEMAN.—In some instances they looked upon us as gods, in some as devils, in all as a very extraordinary race. As an instance of this I will here relate a very absurd story, which will go far to show the fear with which we are looked upon by these superstitious races. After my friend had visited the porcelain tower, being somewhat fatigued, he stepped into a barber's shop, and, by way of employing his time, he desired the barber to shave his head. This gentleman wore a wig, but, for the sake of coolness, he had placed in his pocket. This operation of shaving, so common in China, was speedily and quickly executed, the barber seemed to be delighted with the honor of shaving one of the illustrious strangers. Previously to his leaving the shop, and while the man's attention was called in some other direction, my friend replaced his wig upon his head, little thinking of the result of this simple process. No sooner, however, had the barber turned round and observed him whom he had so lately shaved of every vestige of hair, suddenly covered with a most luxuriant growth, than, taking one steady gaze at him, to make sure he was not deceived, he let fall his razor, cleared the counter at a bound, and, running madly through the crowd which was speedily collected, cried out that he was visited by the devil. No entreaties could induce him to return until every Chinaman had left the neighborhood—so palpable a miracle as this being, in his opinion, quite beyond the powers of all the gods or demons in the Buddhist Calendar. —An Ad de Camp's Recollections of Siam.

THE OLDEST REPUBLIC ON EARTH.—The American Quarterly Review contains a letter from G. W. Irving, Esq. giving a sketch of his visit to San Marino, a small Republic in Italy, between the Apennines, the Po and the Adriatic. The territory of this State is only forty miles in circumference, and its population about 7,000. The Republic was founded more than 1,400 years ago, on moral principles, industry and equality, and has preserved its liberty and independence amidst all the wars and discord which have raged around it. Bonaparte respected it, and sent an embassy to express his sentiments of friendship and fraternity. It is governed by a Captain Regent, chosen every six months by the representatives of the people, (thirty-six in number), who are chosen every six months by the people. The taxes are light, the farms houses are neat, the fields well cultivated, and on all sides are seen comfort and peace and the effect of morality, simplicity, liberty and justice.

For the Daily Sentinel.

MESSRS. EDITORS.—I am a Lawyer by profession, and have recently come among you with a view of obtaining by the practice of it an honest livelihood, if not a well deserved fame. But after an acquaintance with the number of the Members of the Bar in this City—forty I believe,—the amount of legitimate professional business to be done, and particularly with the mode and manner in which business is transacted during the terms of Court, I have concluded not to open an office, nor make myself known to the public as "one of the ancient and honorable fraternity."

In hopes, however, that the pointing out of some scandalous abuses in the mode and manner in which I saw business transacted at the last term of your Court in this county, may lead to some improvement and reformation in respect of the conduct and influence of those concerned in the administration of justice and the effect thereof upon the institutions of our country, I will first notice the defects and faults of the internal arrangement of the Court Room: secondly, the "quackery" of some of the Members of the Bar; and, thirdly, the prodigious power, effect and influence of that same quackery upon His Honor on the Bench. To do justice to this subject will require at least three numbers of your paper to each branch, and as the first relates wholly to the construction and arrangement of the Court room, I suppose I may expect the attention of the Bench and Bar, so far as that part is concerned,—the lay portion of the public, will not, I warrant, be interesting readers of the other two branches. Gloves off, I proceed:—

As you approach the Court room by a most abominable stair-way, you enter through a rickety and noisy double door, the sanctum sanctorum of Justice of Milwaukee County. A room when properly arranged with convenient seats capable of holding at least six hundred persons without incommencing any one engaged in the proper business of the place—is opened before you—with only about ten seats, except those set apart for, and occupied by the jury, and is all of the accommodations for parties, witnesses, un-called jurors and spectators. Thus arranged, that portion of the room will not give seats to more than about one hundred and twenty-five persons at the outside; and what is still worse, even those few seats are all on a level with the floor. Passing by the stove on the right, which appears never to have seen a bush, or anything more black than the mud and dirt with which it is covered, we come to what was probably meant for the Prisoner's box, but as there is another exactly like it upon the opposite side of the room, and as probably no more than one of these boxes ever was, or ever will be filled or used at a time, it is not improbable that this was placed there for ornament, or to help fill up the room—the latter conclusion being strengthened by the fact that the top of one side, of this huge square box is mounted by a large board about a foot wide and three feet long, thereby preventing, from the space it occupies, at least two persons being accommodated with a seat, if need be, which this contrivance of the board now takes up.

Passing by this extra, and extraordinarily contrived Prisoner's box, we approach the place assigned for the Petit Jury. If the arrangement, or rather the absence of all that is proper and convenient in arrangement in that part of the room which we have noticed, is deserving of our condemnation, this, clumsy, awkward and inconvenient arrangement of the jury benches, deserves our loudest execration.—Figure to yourself three benches, some three feet apart, each one step behind and higher than the other with a chimney taking up a part of the third and highest bench, and each bench having a perpendicular board at the end, of a width equal to the width of the seat, and as high as the back thereof, the space left at one end being the only way by which a juror can gain admission to the "delightful place." Picture further to yourself a row of boards set up endwise of about three feet and a half in length, making a wooden rampart of that height extending along the whole length, and about ten inches in front of the front bench, behind which the jurors occupying that first and favorite post in the "dready breach" sit ensconced. Now let the great and clumsy close boarded support for the back of the jurors occupying the first and lower bench, be equally viewed as the partition wall between jury bench number one, and jury bench number two, and the same bungling contrivance between benches number two and number three, and you will have some vague idea of the architectural taste and apposite design of the builder, and the cool comfort, unaffected ease, and exuberant luxury of those who are compelled for some eight hours a day during a period of three and four weeks to be imprisoned there. But the best way of judging of the taste, beauty, propriety, ease and comfort of this arrangement of a jury upon whose temper, disposition and decision depend the property, character, and even lives of our citizens, we must look to the effect produced upon their mind and bodies, as manifested by the expression of their countenances and evinced in their actions during the progress of a long and tedious trial.—Come into Court, therefore, at any time during the second week of the term, and on the second day of a long trial, and you will see—I'll tell you what I saw on such an occasion during the last term, and look! you may see the same. Do you see that first juror on the front seat? His leg, long confined in a cramped position, he is now thrashing and stretching out at the end of the seat. And what, think you, causes those twitches in the face in the juror next him? The same cause that caused the first juror to put out his leg—his limbs long confined by the wooden rampart before him, have fallen asleep, and the sticking sensation produced by a change of their position causes those twitches of countenance you observed.—Do you see the third juror on the front seat? He is seeking relief from the unusual and unnatural confinement and hard seat, by resting his head upon the misnamed bannister—the wooden rampart before him aforesaid. The fourth juror on that seat, having no place in the "box" to deposit the sweets of his "Honey Dew," is resting his neck upon and over the wooden wall before him, whilst the nectar is streaming from his mouth to the floor below on the outside.—Do you see that juror in the second tier, elevating his foot upon the back of the first seat, and upon a level with the countenance of his neighbor in front and below him? Do not laugh at him, for you have not like him, for five hours, suffered the torments of his situation.—His neighbor in front and below, in close proximity to whose face the aforesaid foot is placed, and resting partly upon his shoulder, does not feel offended, nor complain, for he is suffering like torments, and has a fellow feeling for him, and why, therefore, should you, a spectator with full powers and privileges of locomotion, despise or ridicule his want of etiquette, or rail at the supposed lack of propriety? Look at the sixth juror in the front box—both his feet and half his legs are projecting over the wooden fence before him; and do you observe that man who is leaving the witness stand how he takes pains to walk around the harmless prospect, instead of forcing their owner to "haul in," as probably you would compel him to do? That witness has once himself been compelled to do penance vile as a juror in that same jury box, and he knows from sad experience what it is to suffer in that worse than felon's box.—Observe now; (if see him, you can,) that man in the "third lot." No support for his aching sides and back but the cold plastering of the perpendicular walls of the old smoked up room, he has gradually settled himself down to the very edge of his hard seat, and endeavoring to rest his long pent up and weary limbs by placing his knees against the back of his neighbor's seat in front of him, and although you can now only see the hair on the top of his head, I dare say that, relieved by a change of position, what is said by the witness now makes a better and stronger impression upon his mind than what was testified to whilst he was in an agony of suffering in his bolt upright position. Do not laugh at the spasmodic contortions of the countenance of the man next to him. That man is a paragon of patience—I might almost say Patience Personified. No small suffering, I assure you, would disturb the serenity and equanimity of his countenance. We will not stop to notice particularly these two jurors sitting in the seat below him.—Each is endeavoring to beguile the pain he suffers by diverting his mind with whatever may tend to make him forget it, or render him insensible to it, and under all the circumstances in their position, it is perfectly excusable that one should whistle and the other read a newspaper. They show themselves at least resigned to their fate, and that is what you, in their situation, would not, and could not do.

ANGLO SAXON.

Mr. HALE has laid on our table the 9th number of the "WANDERING JEW," by Eugene Sue. We have before spoken of this romance as being one of thrilling interest and exciting incident. The number before us fully sustains the character of the author and the story. It may be had at HALE'S bookstore.

Messrs. Daggett and Richardson, at the Milwaukee Variety store, have a large assortment of the most complete, choice, original, cute, unique, comfortable and fanciful articles, which we have seen offered for sale in the Western country. If any little nic nae is wanted, from a mouse-trap up to a whole army of invincible soldiers, (sons of Leod, of course), anything in the line of Yankee "ingenuity" call at the store of our friends, D. & R. They've got the substantial articles which are required by the sterner realities of life, also.

The unkindest cut of all.—To clothe a locofoco from head to foot, with whom you have bet, with fine clothes, and then have him cut your acquaintance.

Right of Suffrage in Paraguay.—When Dr. Francia was elevated to the office of Chief Magistrate of Paraguay, a Council of State with whom he was to advise was also established, to consist of seven persons, to be chosen by electors. The electors were to be chosen in the parishes, by married men, widowers, and widows—unmarried men, or men of bad name, or women who had never been married, not being allowed to vote. Francia never entertained a very elevated idea of old bachelors. Like our own Franklin, he regarded them somewhat in the light of the half of an old pair of scissors.

A King's Cash Box.—The London Morning Chronicle notices a superb money box, made by one of the most celebrated artificers in the Great Metropolis, and completed for the use of his Majesty, the King of Ashantee. It is made of solid silver, and weighs two hundred and seventy-six ounces, the size being seventeen inches long, twelve inches wide, and seven inches deep. The ornaments and chasing, consisting chiefly of lions, tigers, and Elephant's heads, are of the richest description; and the box, which is intended to hold his Majesty's gold dust, is secured by one of the detector locks, having a massive gold key. It will no doubt inspire the subjects of his Majesty, with a proper idea of foreign manufactures.

MARBLE YARD.—NATHANIEL WARREN, Marble Manufacturer, three doors north of the Post Office, main street, opposite the Milwaukee House, having brought on an extensive quantity of Vermont and Mass. chert-marble, of the finest quality of Marble, carved and lettered in the most perfect style of art—PAINT STONES, MULLERS, HEARTHS, Mantels, Jambes, Compositors' Tables, Tables, Tomb Tables, etc. He will also furnish to order Monuments in strictly architectural style, and lettering that will bear inspection.—Also any kind of building work that may be called for, on much better terms than can be obtained at the east.

The proprietor of this establishment has had much experience in his line of business, and feels perfectly assured of giving satisfaction in filling any orders from the city or country. He will take especial pains to please those who may favor him with their orders. Orders from the country respectfully solicited and promptly attended to. [Milwaukee, Dec. 3, 1844.]
